DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. Applicants have amended their claims to recite that the leaves are shredded. This limitation could not be found in the specification and therefore it is considered to embody new matter.

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 4 is indefinite because the scope of the phrase "about" is unknown. Applicants argue that because the term is found in patented claims, that its use is always proper and definite. The term is a relative term which renders the claim indefinite. The term is not defined by the claim, the specification does not provide a standard for ascertaining the requisite degree, and one of ordinary skill in the art would not be reasonably apprised of the scope of the invention.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Steinkraus (Indigenous Fermented Foods, pp.389-97) in view of Applicants' admissions (pages 1-6) and in further view of Partida et al. (U.S. Pat. No. 5,846,333)("Partida").

Steinkraus and applicants admit that cited in the last Office Action. Applicants have amended the independent claim to include the step of shredding the tissue of the agave leaves. Applicants also admit that chopping leaves or plant material pieces with conventional equipment." It would have been obvious to those of ordinary skill in the art to shred the leaves as admitted by applicants in order to expose the inner plant cells that contain fermentable sugars.

Further, Partida teaches the production of fructose from agave plants. In order to extract the fructose Partida states that conventional means are used, whereby the plant is chopped into 2-4 inch lengths and then these are pulverized in between fiber removing disks to produce a pulp. The pulping is considered to read on the term "shred." Therefore, it would have been obvious to those of ordinary skill in the art to pulverize the agave plant material of Steinkraus in order to fully extract the fermentable components.

Applicants' attention is invited to In re Levin, 84 U.S.P.Q. 232 and the cases cited therein, which are considered in point in the fact situation of the instant case, and wherein the Court stated on page 234 as follows:

This court has taken the position that new recipes or formulas for cooking food which involve the addition or elimination of common ingredients, or for treating them in ways which differ from the former practice, do not amount to invention, merely because it is not disclosed that, in the constantly developing art of preparing food, no one else ever did the particular thing upon which the applicant asserts his right to a patent. In all such cases, there is nothing patentable unless the applicant by a proper showing further establishes a coaction or cooperative relationship between the selected ingredients which produces a new, unexpected, and useful function. In re Benjamin D. White, 17 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 956, 39 F.2d 974, 5 U.S.P.Q. 267; In re Mason et al., 33 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 1144, 156 F.2d 189, 70 U.S.P.Q. 221.

Response to Arguments

Applicants' arguments filed 06/18/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicants argue that the instantly claimed process embodies unexpected results and therefore the obviousness rejection is obviated. The burden is on applicants to provide a convincing showing that the results obtained are unexpected. No showing was provided and therefore the argument is unpersuasive.

Applicants argue that the cited art does not anticipated the addition of nutrients. First, it is noted that the addition of additives is only found in claims 5 and 6. Applicants admit themselves that the claimed additives are notoriously well known. Specifically, on page 3 of their specification, they state that sugar, such as cane sugar has been added in amounts of up to 49% to produce "mixto tequila" and that this "type of processing has been in progress for hundreds of years in Mexico." (See page 3, ¶¶ 16 and 17 of instant specification). Further, applicants admit that "modern plants add chemicals to accelerate yeast growth so fermentation results in a more robust body.” (Pages 5-6, instant specification). Lastly, Steinkraus state that recent improvements in the production of pulque include the adjustment of sugar concentration. (Page 397, top).

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
